FARM AID BILL TESTS LEADERS' POLITICAL SKILL

Senate and House Maneuver to Obtain Last Action on New Measure

EXPECT PRESIDENT TO VETO FEE PLAN

Then Branch That First Voted for Bill Must Decide on Overruling Executive

WASHINGTON—Farm legislation leaders of the two branches of Congress are engaged in keen, undersurface maneuvers to force each other to be first to pass on the issue this session. They are united on legislation; but passage of a bill is not the problem.

The winner in this sharp struggle will have passed the "political buck" to the loser. In this important election year this is a serious matter.

Farm leaders in Congress see only one contest ahead of them as far as their equalization fee bill is concerned; overriding the veto of the President. Because they are doubtful about that, or as is charged by their opponents, because they really do not wish to set aside the President's negation, preferring to have the issue rest on the political situation, they are fencing among themselves to avoid being the first to pass upon the President's rejection.

With 33 senators and the entire House of Representatives up for reelection this year, overriding presidential vetoes on such issues as the equalization fee, is a matter of much concern to the members, particularly some of the major leaders who have presidential and, even more numerous, vice-presidential ambitions.

The bills of the two branches are identical as to the equalization fee, the only important difference being that the Senate measure calls for a $225,000,000 appropriation and the House bill a $400,000,000 grant. The fee plan as contained in the bill is described as the "deferred" method.

Spain to Take Part in Race With Canada

SPECIAL TO THE CHEISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Ottawa

CLOUCESTER and Nova Scotian

Gishermen are beginning to tighten their ropes if not their belts in preparation for a grander race than has ever gone before. Spain will battle with the two old rivals for the fishing schooner supremacy on the high seas, and the proposed course will stretch all the way from Sandy Hook to a Spanish port and back, or perhaps on a triangular route to Halifax.

Canada has just received the consent of the King of Spain to its being a third party in the race. Although none of the details has been arranged as yet, the Gloucester fishermen are expected to enter the Zodiac and the Nova Scotians the Bluenose.

Feel Certain of Victory

There is no doubt among the farm bloc of the certainty of victory in the two houses. They wan handly the first phase of the legislative contest. The Agricultural Committees of both houses reported by safe majorities the kind of a bill the equalisation fee proponents desired.

These leaders express publicly the view that the revised measure "will meet the objections of President Coolidge." Privately they are maneuvering in preparation for a presidential veto.

Under the parliamentary rules operative in Congress the house which first passes a measure is required to take first action on a presidential veto. This rule would hold good on farm relief legislation.

Neither group wishes to be placed on record as voting to override the President. Each is of the conviction that neither branch could muster with the player. If we consider acting a war to end war," said Miss Agnes MacPhail, Progressive member for Southeast Gray, in introduction in Parliament calling in Parliament calling for the promonous of such a government department "for the promonous clin of peace and international understanding."

Safeguards Home Owner Zoning is the system which safeguards a home owner in a residential section from having a commercial garage built next door. In a nutshell a survey shows that is what the system consists of. It restricts the kind of buildings whether residence, factory or business to prescribed areas. disputes through conciliation, she declared, and the most noteworthy case was the Rush-Bagot Treaty at the close of the War of 1812, in which "we prepared for peace and had peace." She also referred to the International Joint Commission, which had dealt successfully with 20 cases between the United States and Canada during the last 17 years, as "a brilliant example of the best method of settling disputes."

She suggested that the work of the peace department would be the dissemination of peace propaganda throughout the Dominion and the world at large, the study of the causes and the wastefulness of war, and the bestowing of peace awards on those most active in the cause of international amity. It would "be calling to the highest in us rather than the lowest, for peace is the highest aim in the world today," she concluded.

General Hertzog's claim to the right of neutrality was based on what he termed the "Dominion's new-found independence" and the right of each dominion to be the sole judge as to the extent of its co-operation within the Empire.

He asked the House to vote for the motion to adopt the report on the imperial conference, not on account of what it might mean to any particular person, but because of the unmis-takable language in which it said what it meant, and in "which it declared to us 'our freedom'—our freedom and equality, our absolute equality in the freedom to exercise every function, every power, every privilege of national life, without owing any subordination to any au-

which are no less than 7% feet high. The driving power is provided by three Rolls-Royce Condor engines of 650 horsepower each.

On its first trial only the pilot, Squadron Leader J. Noakes, and one nechanic were on board and the flight appeared to be entirely suc-cessful as the machine was maneuvered in circles at a height of 2000 feet. The take-off appeared to be ac-complished without difficulty, the machine rising easily after a run of about a quarter of a mile and instead of against the wind actually rose with it, thus testifying to the pilot's confidence. On landing, the Inflexible ran for about 300 yards before pulling up. The design is after the plans of Dr. Rohrbach, the wings being almost pure cantilever and giving an impression of great strength. The metal used throughout is duralumin.

Throughout this series the purely orchestral works have been conspicuously more successful than those employing a soloist. The only exception was the exquisite Bach Concerto in which Messrs. The measure principally urged by mill owners is one to remove a provision of the Massachusetts law which forbids textile factories to employ women after 6 p. m. and to leave them subject to the same limit which applies to all other industries. 10 p. m. This bill, sponsored by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, has passed the Senate and is before the House.

Proponents of the bill emphasize that it does not change the legal limitation of 48 hours of work per week for women in industry and hold that it relates solely to "the discrimination now unfairly operating against."

Dodge Macknight

There is sure pleasure in the pictures by Dodge Macknight. One is drawn unwittingly to his displays, whether they are in a museum or an art gallery, because he retains a note of freshness, utterly frank, impersonal. Thus in reality it is not so much the state as the landlords of pre-war houses who have subsidized the building of new apartments.

TO BUILD NEW at the population.

As it is, rents of new apartments vary from 150 to 170 per cent of the pre-war rates, but even this is too high for the average German. Moreover a premium of about 300 marks must be paid per room when moving into a new apartment. Thus it is that, despite the increasing building activity, the crying need for cheap apartments is not being met.

The Government has undertaken to fix the rents of pre-war apart-ments, and has, moreover, prohibited rents of new subsidy apartments. Thus two rents exist in Germany today: that on the pre-war apartments, which is 120 per cent of the pre-war rate, and the rent of the new subsidy apartments, which is about 25 per cent higher.

Private capital now is little inclined to enter long-term invest-ments. The interest on first mortgages, therefore, is about 9 per cent Second mortgages are scarcely obtainable. The inability of the population to pay high rents also greatly

Also many corporations, such as gas works, lighting and street car companies, are erecting homes for their employees. In some instances carpenters, locksmiths or bricklayers' groups are combining to build house without profits, speculating or the rents for their compensation.

The great need today is for small apartments, not costing more than 50 marks monthly, which is about the most the average workman can pay. The problem to be solved is to acquire capital on sufficiently favorable conditions to permit the building of such apartments.

Very low roundtrip fares this summer on all railroads to San Francisco

San Francisco

Gateway to adventurecapital of vacation land-America's coolest summer city-Low fares start May 15

Those mysterious children! Merry, saucy daughters of inscrutable China, born and reared on American soil - here is something new on this old planet. They are a part of the everyday life in San Francisco, typifying the age-old romance and youthful zest of this fascinating city.

For San Francisco is an alluring city to visit. It's a complete vacation to saunter her streets, mingle with her cosmopolitan crowds, and feel her cool breezes. Come this summer! Golf, motor, haunt her shops, streets and hotels, and browse around in a golden summer climate where the maximum average temperature is only 65°, and where it doesn't rain.

Superb golf courses border the Golden Gate and dot the Pacific's shore for miles. Yosemite, the Big Trees, and other vast natural wonders—four national parks for sightseeing and recreation-stand in San Francisco's back garden. 44,000 miles of good motor roads and many scenic rail lines ribbon out from San Francisco to the high mountains, orchard valleys, redwood groves and sea beaches. Countless things to do and see. Hotels and charming resorts of every price and description, in and about San Francisco, will accommodate your family delightfully.

It will be a "double profit" vacation, for you'll play, rest and also have a chance to see the region in which, some day, you may make your home.

Very low summer fares will be in effect on all railroads beginning May 15. You can see the whole Pacific Coast for only a little more. The Victory and Lincoln overland highways will be splendid for motoring. Or you can come by restful steamship, via Panama Canal. Ask your local travel ally are obvious in the telling and overacted. It is all a matter of treatment. To make a good picture time must be taken to get every incident right. This is why the specials are generally in the foreground of public approval. They are beaconlights to the whole industry and to those producers who are forced to turn out from 50 to 70 feature length productions a year. They stimulate and encourage, not alone those within the industry, but all connected with it, such as exhibitors and reviewers. The program picture is a necessary element of the business, for if the motion picture theaters depended upon the eight or ten leading stars and the comparatively few specials made in a year they could not possibly keep their doors open. The industry needs the feature picture to keep the eight or ten leading stars and the comparatively few specials made in a year they could not possibly keep their doors open. The industry needs the feature picture to keep the photoplay advancing, but it equally needs the machine-made product to feed that enormous and sustained demand of the 20,000 theaters in the United States for a ters in the United States for a stream of new films to entertain their daily audience of 20,000,000 not their own. He should be the guide, not the dictator, if the full color of the individual player is to

In the early days pictures were often overdirected, as they are now. But the motion picture has been groping toward an understanding of itself, and slowly evolving the tech-nique of the photoplay as we know it today. It took a long time to learn that a picture was not a photograph of a stage play, and that the eyes must speak rather than the lips.

Need of Truthfulness It is not possible to fool the camera. Its lens is the eye of the public, and it looks within the player, searching out his inmost thoughts and revealing them to you. That is why the player must be truly him-self, and honest with himself, if he is to make his best impression on the screen. The camera sees through every subterfuge. You cannot fool that lens as you can deceive the audience at a play. The camera sees it ril. and the screen player is made to feel humble, indeed, when he sees himself in the projection room with ril his imperfections revealed. When a scene is being taken, the least little disconcerting incident can in-

I find that I can cut my scenes without a pang when they fall short of what I feel to be interesting. Sometimes I can see in my even in the out a pang when they fall short of what I feel to be interesting. Sometimes I can see in my eyes in the picture that my thoughts were not on the story of the play. Again, I see a flash of something I think is good, and I am as grateful as if it had nothing to do with myself, as if it were something beautiful that had been handed to me to delight in and to pass along for the pleaure of others. For talent is, after all, a trust, something which we are forbidden to hide in a napkin lest it belost. To preserve our gifts we must use them, and we grow only as we share with others what we have.

Openness to Criffelsm

It is nacessary, too, to be able to absorb an indefinite amount of criticism. After the first flush of wounded pride passes we realize that a some trust, something back of the fault-flading.

Aside from the fact that too much of the teat is used and that judged by almost any standard "The Merry Wives of Windsor"—traditionally considered to have been written to order—is not a good play, the festivities at the Knickerhocker Theater these evenings are quite gay.

Mrs. Piske and Henrietta Crosman are by far the most satisfactory in the roles of "Mistress Page" and "Mistress Ford" of any actresses seen in these parts for many years past, and two other such sprightly interpretations will not, in all probability, be seen for many years to come. Mrs. Fiske's sense of humor and comedy acting method is too well known and liked to require particular comment and Miss Crosman, who is equally good, brings to the part of Mistress Ford all of the beauty and twinkle necessary for a well-nigh perfect portrayal. Composite Authorship The story is a most difficult problem in motion picture making. The modern tendency is to employ too many talents on its construction in an effort to make it effective in every part. Someone will write their daily audience of 20,000,000 in an effort to make it effective people.

The problem of good acting on the screen is bound up closely with the problem of good directing. A good director, in my opinion, is one that draws the best out of his players instead of imposing his will upon them. Acting by its very nature is expression, and there is no acting in the right sense of the word when the director does all the thinking for the cast. If a director turns his cast into a group of puppets, moving only in obedience to his words, they are externally manifesting his impulses, not their own. He should be the has evaporated in the process of translation to the screen by the vari-

A Gantlet of Difficulties

Even when we guard our original ealously, the finished result is seldom more than 50 per cent representative of the first author's work. Too many talents must be employed along the way, too many devices must be found for making abstract ideas concrete in the picture, to make possible any absolutely faithful transference of an original story to the screen. That is then of thousands of spectators gazmaking of a picture play, a devotion to the central idea of the story. The star must not be allowed to exploit herself at the expense of the story, the director must not indulge his personal eccentricities at the cost of marring the pure appeal of the story's idea, and the camera men are not to be allowed to go on a photo-graphic holiday and lose the story in their velvet shadows and mysterious half tones. If we get into any of these allurtle disconcerting incident can instantly break the mood, and that is why the studios are so strict in keeping visitors off the set. Once the train of thought is broken, it is that halloos for us and calls us back to the main road of entertaining you and providing you with emotional exercise, for that is what you require the train of thought is broken, it is exercise, for that is what you require sometimes never regained. I think, next to a golf player, the motion deal in pictures that doesn't mean a next to a golf player, the motion picture actor is more sensitive and more susceptible to distracting influences than any other human being. Happily we can cancel many of our shortcomings and retake scenes that fall short before they are revealed to the public. It is entirely an impersonal feeling we have as we sit in the projections we have as we sit in the projections.

Staging Ibsen's Visions

The general scholastic background

risen enormously during the past 30 for training in library science and years. Time was when persons who "loved books" were able to join the ranks of librarians with little or no foreign languages, although certain schools are content to accept one. The curriculum of the library school itself covers such subjects as book-selecting, evaluation, reference work, bibliography, classification, cata-loguing, history of libraries, buildings, community relations, school libraries, lending systems and library libraries, lending systems and library administration. The New Point of View

Then came forward two American romen to put new meaning into the ancient Greeks for her inspiration. The other, Ruth St. Denis, went to the Orient and there learned how the people of the East express their thoughts in dancing. In Japan every child is taught first to dance.

So Ruth St. Denis, by pouring her new inspiration into the older European technique, revolutionized the tions. art of dancing 'I always try to impersonalize my

The Quest for Beauty in the Educational Process

V .- Precedent-to Be Followed or Established?

Beauty of the Right Way

On one occasion a young teacher in company with a supervisor was returning to her room from which she had been absent for a few minutes. A great uproar was going on within. The teacher paied and braced herself for an ordeal as she started toward the door. The supervisor said, "Let me go in instead, please." A scene of complete confusion greeted her, children on desks, missiles flying through the air, high pitched voices calling. All activity froze as the supervisor came into the room and the children waited for her to speak. When the room was perfectly quiet she spoke with a low tone, "Why have you stopped what you were doing? If it was right to do it, go shead with it. If it was wrong, surely you do not intend to do it anyway. You see, it makes no difference about the rightness or the wrongness of a thing whether anyone sees you do it or not. If it is right, do it. If it is wrong do mot do it—whether anyone is looking or not. I am now going to leave you alone in this room for some time. You will do whatever it is right for you to do because it is right." She left the room in the midst of a deep silence. After a time the teacher returned to find perfect order. She followed the lead which had been given her and "discipline problem" for that class had been solved.

We have called this department "The Parent," but it is not in any sense exclusively for those to whom the actual daily guidance of children has been given. We like to think of it rather as a channel for the parent quality of thought wheyever it may be, manifested in all its aspects of love for children and young folks, and of an earnest desire to contribute toward their growth and progress. It is our hope that the letters and short articles sent in to the column by those who are finding this department of special interest, may be not only a means of sharing with many the writers joy in a true unfoldment of the child thought, but also a means of bringing together through a "grown-ups" mail bag" new friends throughout the world.

The purpose of this letter is to tell how the Children's Page helps me. There is always a good wholesome, loving, helpful bedtime story. I always cut these stories out to save them to tell my little girl. In fact, I will make an album of them. We—my daughter and I—love the pictures together with the verses, and some we have cut out and framed. some we have cut out and framed. These stories and pictures radiate love. I also like "Wee Tales of Great Heroes."

When one is alone a great deal of the time, one has many thoughts nents and oceans, and we—just be-(and I must add, not always of the best). To be able to enjoy our children the most, and have them enjoy us also, we must learn to see and think of things as they do, and by doing so we find we are seeing and thinking about our experiences and our friends in a bigger, better way. Youth never thinks of a difficulty as something to hinder or harm through which they may prove themselves victor. They are quick to express gratitude and never refer back to past troubles unless it is to remind us of the joy that was theirs in overcoming. Children never hold resentment and they respond very quickly to love. For instance, try smiling at the children on the corner or in the street car and see how quickly they smile back to you.

Our oldest son is active in athletics and in the Scout movement. His father attends most of the games with him. They look forward to the games and talk over the players and the plays made by them.

Little Children With a Map If the children show an interest in geography and maps, let them have a large map of the United Statesto others who may have traveled pin it low on the blackboard or lay it on the floor. Let Bobbie, second grade, with his toy engine, play going from one city to another; or Bernard, third grade, with his toy boat, travel from one ocean to the other through the wonderful Panama

It is surprising how many places they can find and how much preparatory work will thus be done before the formal taking up of geography in the fourth and fifth grades.

College Association of Parents and Teachers

> RGANIZATION of parent teacher associations in colleges is taking an outstandthe place in the projects of the parent-teacher organizations throughout the country. Mrs. J. W. Bingham of Leland Stanford University, who is national chairman of this phase of organization, states some of the advantages of a college association. For the college: It is a means of communication between the college authorities and the college public. It is a means of securing co-operation between the community at large and them, but as a stepping stone the college authorities. For individual members: It offers an opportunity for members to he-come informed on the various phases of college life. Parents are thus bet-ter able to understand the change of environment and appreciate prob-lems confronting the college stu-dent. Parents who are newcomers in a college community meet congen-ial acquaintances. The association may form the basis of social life of these patrons. Topics of current interest are discussed by able men and women in the meetings and members are thus enabled to keep abreast

That this is great poetry no or because so much of his energy was poured into the political arena has become obscured as a poet.

And out of obscurity he begins at last to emerge. Within recent years no less than twelve hundred pages of his verse have been collected. But it is not the extent of his labors which has astonished students of American who is traditionally regarded as our less than twelve hundred pages of his verse have been collected. But it is not the extent of his labors which has astonished students of American who is traditionally regarded as our less than twelve hundred pages of his verse have been collected. But it is genuine, and fragrance. Its blossom is an elonature. To give it due credit we must remember that Freneau was writing a whole generation before Bryant, hover around it, attracted by the bright color. The foliage is feathery and heaviful will contend. But it is genuine, and erature; it is rather the originality first important poet. Much of Frenitherto considered—and with reaon—not propitious for the developient of literary tradition. When the great Scottish writer further recorded his pleasure in 'memorizing Freneau's verses "Eutaw Springs," this, to my knowledge, at least, marks the first time that American poetry made an im-pression in the Old World. As already intimated, most of Freneau's talents were absorbed in the stirring political events of his time. So, much of this poetry, perhaps far too much, is concerned with such subjects as attracted Scott. Perhaps his most stirring and memorable patriotic verse are the stansas of the Ode beginning:

God save the Rights of man's Give us a heart to scan Blessings so dear; Lef them be spread around Wherever man is found, And with the welcome sound Ravish his ear,

Toward the close of his extraordinarily crowded and versatile career an acquaintance wrote this description of him: "He was somewhat below the ordinary height; in person thin yet muscular, with a firm step, though a little inclined to stoop; his countenance wore traces of care, yet lightened with intelligence as he spoke; he was mild in enunciation, neither rapid or slow, but clear, disneither rapid or slow, but clear, dis-tinct, and emphatic. His forehead was rather beyond the medium elevation, his eyes a dark gray, occupying a socket deeper than common; his slag. The He was free of all ambitious gray. He was free of all ambitious displays; his habitual expression was

"As he had at command types and a printing-press, when an incident of moment in the Revolution oc-

Perhaps great poetry does not issue out of such novel improvisation.

We can only be astonished that any poetry should have issued. We can only marvel at the power of the impulse which found expression in the face of all circumstances. And so we shall at last give Philip Freneau his due.

Pale bright green laughter!
A little fig tree held up its hands
Toward our gray spring sky,
Tossing alott little new leaves,
Tossing but holding them carefully,
Pale bright green leaves. Tossing but holding them car Pale bright green leaves, Tossing them with laughter! With laughter!

Today I heard laughter!
A mocking bird sang.—
Such a song!
Accompanied with laughter!

The wild mustard is in bloom and in the fields at the foot of the hills it grows waist-deep. Its gold, with the crimson of the clover and the blue of lupine, gives a wealth of color that no artist's brush could excel

The bright-yellow sand flowers are beginning to bloom—their little gold cups remind one of the buttercups in eastern pastures. They hug the ground closely, and have scant, gray-ish-green foliage. The sand verbena is now trailing its pretty vine and bright, purplish-pink blooms over patches of sand. How beautiful and ragrant are the floweret clusters.

It is generally conceded that within its confines is gathered more of natural beauty, if not more of historic and literary association, than may be found elsewhere. Exeter is there, with its serene Cathedral Church of St. Peter, of which the shadowy beginnings are traceable in the reign of Edward the Confessor; and Plymouth which saw the final departure of the Pilgrim Fathers. Plymouth Hoe recalls that scene of Kingsley's Westward Ho!" where the news was brought to Drake, at his game of bowis, that the Spanish Armada was of the sea under certain lights. They wind through quaint villages in the hollows of the hills where, from doorways under thatched eaves, housewives and rosy children wave friendly greetings. On either side of the road hedges are tangled masses of verdure and bloom, flushing to pink with foxglove or burning to the yellow and red of scarlet berries and goldenrod. Now and then, through an open gateway, one glimpses a driveway bordered by poplars or elms, leading to the great house which watches

Chinese Literary Tablets

But the best thing in town for us, and one of the most impressive in all China, was Pei Lin-the Forest of Tablets, Back in dim times when Britons were painting themselves blue and Europe was barbarian, these great slabs of close-grained ringing stone had been inscribed Imperial order. In later evil days they were proscribed and many were broken or lost. But now for centuries the scores that were saved, together with hundreds of later ones, have been gathered together under the shadow of long-roofed buildings where all day the wooden mailets hammer wet paper into the deep-cut stone characters as the makers of rubbings produce their stock in trade for Peking scholars and literary men. One series of inscriptions, cut in the ninth century after Christ, is copied by the thousand and used for a copy book by the children of the Chinese primary schools because of its perfect calligraphy.

Here, too, stands the famous Nes-torian tablet with its cross cut in the stone above the inscription. . . . It was set up in 781 A. D., centuries before Marco Polo or Prester. Even the Nestorian tablet and its suggestion of kinship with something in our own past was not the glory of the Pei Lin for me. I was searching for something else, and presently I found it in the twilight, first one and then half a dozen black slabs higher than my head. The characters on the faces were splendidly cut in deep-graved ideographs, but on the thick edges was a delicate tracery of flower a beast and demigod with which I had been familiar, through rubbings, for a score of years. Back in an American study they had hung, my constant companions, and I had often wondered as I looked at them if I should ever see the originals. As I traced the sensitive outlines of the

Four Are Women's World Marks and One Is Men's Made by Walter Laufer

CHICAGO — World's records for women in four events and another record for men were broken here Monday night when the Illinois Women's Athletic Club defeated the Parkdale Dolphinets of Toronto, champions of Canada, 48 to 16, in the first international dual meet of girls's swimming teams ever held. The Women's Central A. A. U. record was tied in the 220-yard free style championship race. The pool is a 60-foot one.

Remarkable improvement was shown by the I. W. A. C. girls, coached by Miss Lillian Reilly, in breaking the world's records. Miss Jane Fauntz broke two in the breaststroke held previously by Miss Agnes Geraghty of the New York, Women's Swimming Association. She won the 100-yard dual race in 1m. 20.8s., bettering by 2-10s. the old mark, and then continued to 100 meters in 1m. 29.6s., improving the former standard by 1.4s.

The score, 15—3, 15—4, 16—4, hardly indicates the tense nature of the struggle, or the brilliancy of the rallies. Only by the use of the court craft for which the Mercury Foot coach is noted was he able to hold his young opponent to so small a score. The winner played a very conservative game, watching for openings, and de-pending chiefly on the errors of Don-

The lineup of the Tigers, individually, hardly compares with many of the other teams in the C.-A. H. L., but as a team there is no club with the courage to carry on under any kind of handicap that this club has. Since the season is so near at an end, the players on each team have much to hustle for besides winning the desired championship; their positions for next season are being considered and a good showing might be necessary to each and every one of them. and every one of them.

The second game between these two teams will be played in Providence, since the Beavers have selected the Rhode Island city for their home rink, being unable to depend upon natural

GAME THURSDAY Hollywood vs. Richfield.

HOLLYWOOD IN PLAYOFFS BPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—The game Monday night in the California Hockey League was pronounced the best of the entire season. Maroons worked hard in an endeavor to get into the playoff series with Richfield, the winners of first place, but Hollywood defeated them 2 to 1, thus gaining the right. Lloyd Cook scored for Maroons. Ward and Brandow scoring for Hollywood.

Although finishing in the runner-up position. Princeton established what is probably a record for the league by scoring a total of 329 points. This betters by only one point the total of 328 made by Columbia in 1926 and it is only the second time in the last 10 years that a league has scored more than 300 points.

Cornell Divides 10 Games

Tigers and Quebec

Meet in Playoffs

With playoffs about all that remains in the present hockey season, Boston fans are fortunate in having two teams which have qualified for the extra games, with the Boston Tigers facing the Quebec Beavers at the Boston Arena tonight in the Canadian-American Hockey League playoffs.

The Tigers ended a fine season under Manager Powers and finished the regular schedule with a lead of three points over the Quebec entrants, who ended in third place after a rather hard season, made so by their late start, which necessitated playing many games with a few days of interval.

The lineup of the Tigers, individuative forms as an uncertainty. There were only two veterans, Capt. Theodore Schlossbach '28 to count on. Nevertheless the team managed to divide their 10 games evenly in the won and lost columns. The Ithacans were clearly superior to both the Yale and Columbia quintets, defeating them both twice, but against Pennsylvania, Princeton and Dartmouth, Cornell was practically at a loss. The team managed to capture one game from Princeton but lost the other by the top-heavy score of 30 to 18. Pennsylvania had little difficulty defeating the Cornellians, 34 to 18 and 28 to 26, while Dartmouth far surpassed them, 37 to 24 and 41 to 29. It was only a fair team but with 8 of the 10 who saw most service this season returning next year, Cornell should make a sands of dollars devoted to charity season wih a record of 30 defeats in its past 32 league games. In spite of this extremely poor showing over a period of more than three seasons, the Elis showed fine promise for the 1928 season and started off to come up to expectations by defeating Pennsylvania in the first game of the season and then taking the measure of Dartmouth, 1927 champions, for its second mouth, 1927 champions, for its second straight victory. From then on, however, the Eli came out on top only once, and that was against Dartmouth again. Yale at least can claim the capturing its second straight title. However, the Eli displayed a far superior brand of basketball than they have for many seasons, losing most of their games by small margins and maintaining the Yale reputation of persistency throughout the season. Yale has now lost 37 of its last 42 league contests. The team finished out of last place, however, for the first time in four straight seasons, giving way to Columbia. Yale's attack was much stronger than its defense.

Columbia in Slump

Despite the fine playing of F. E. Rieger '28 and Capt. W. J. Madden '28 Columbia failed to make a favorable impression in the league race atther.

Rieger '28 and Capt. W. J. Madden '28 Columbia failed to make a favorable impression in the league race either offensively or defensively. Both of its victories were scored against Yale by one-point margins. It was no match for either Princeton or Pennsylvania and lost by good margins to Dartmouth twice. Cornell easily captured its first game against the Blue and White, but had to work for the second to win 28 had to work for the second to win 28 to 26. Columbia loses four of its star players and one fine substitute by graduation, this year, so that the outlook is not very promising for another season. The record of the season's games follows:

STOCKS TURN WEAK AFTER LONG UPRUSH

Flood of Selling Orders Throughout Market-Good Rally

NEW YORK, March 26 (P)—A wide sen break in stock prices, followed y a partial recovery, today brought a dramatic climax a spectacular of partial four weeks.

NEW YORK, March 26 (29)—A wide open break in stock prices, followed by a partial recovery, today brought it is a farmatic climax a speciated by a long of the control of a farmatic climax a speciated by a partial recovery, today brought it is a farmatic climax a speciated by a partial recovery, today brought it is a farmatic climax a speciated by a partial recovery, today brought it is a farmatic climax a speciated by a partial recovery.

So great was the volume of trading that the ticker fell reactly a minutes behind the actual market before the control of the control o in the Mispinon by Movins up 34 points to 118, a high record, and Rock island advanced 8 points to a new top at 1164.

Mions Sheffield soured nearly 8 points to a new high at 1864, and Gulf Sintes Meet Moved up 1 to a new poek at 60 to a new poek a penunption of buyins in other stocks. Reveral well-known issues peached pew highs, including Sinclair Oil, Corn Products, Public Service of New Jersey, St. Paul common and preferred and Commercial Solvents. Montgomery-Ward, Case Threshing Machine and Gabriel Snubbers were 3 to 5 points above yesterday's close, Total sales exceeded 4.500,000 shares.

While the undertone continued firm, 1 the bond market disclosed spots of heaviness in fairly active early trading today. Some selling doubtless was inspired by yesterday's stiffening of the money rates.

St. Paul' issues again were in demand, the Adjustment 5s of 2000 advancing to a new peak at 69 to Denver, Rio Grande & Western general 5s also touched a new high for the year at 96 to a new peak at 69 to Denver, Rio Grande & Western general 5s showed some improvement. Hudson & Manhattan Refunding 5s, Chicago & Alton 3 to show a Baltimore, & Ohio Refunding 5s were heavy.

The utilities were inclined to be heavy, Detroit Edison Refunding 6s and Columbus Gas & Electric 5s lossing ground.

Steel Company obligations especially were soft among the industrials. Although Central Steel 8s moved up a point, Illinols Steel 5s showed some losses.

The House of Hodson has analyzed, approved and placed with investors the securities of scores of substantial financial institutions. The House believes in the policy of allowing investors to share in the profits which their money helps to make possible. The idea has been to give the investor as much as possible rather than as little as possible.

Participating Bonds

are obligations of corporations engaged in a branch of the financial field, where earnings are larger than in

COTTON CLOTH SALES SHOWING DECIDED GAINS

Improved Tone Noted in New Bedford-Bag Trade Active-Prints Lead

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 27nterest in the primary cotton goods narket is exhibited in a much wider variety of constructions. There is a decidedly improved tone throughout the market.

Some manufacturers report that they are sold up through June and even into July, and have withdrawn temporarily from the market. This situation, however, does not apply to the whole market.

Other factors

even into July, and have withdrawn temporarily from the market. This situation, however, does not apply to the whole market.

Other factors report some days as very good, with others quiet, so that in the property good, with others quiet, so that in the whole is stored was only a little better than the average. Results on the whole show that last week was the best of this year.

Curtailment has been increased in the North and especially in Fall River, where it is reported that the activity is only 20 per cent of capacity.

The bag trade came into the market for fairly large amounts of sheetings and the automobile and artificial leather trades showed interest in wide goods. Normal users of sheetings are said to be decidedly undersupplied for the second quarter.

Print cloths led the market, with interest more active and in a wider variety of constructions. Sales of several million yards were made in 64x60s for April; May and June delivery at 7% @7%c, a distinct advance. Spot and April delivery of 65x72s sold for 8%c but May and June delivery was contracted for at 8%c.

A good business in 80 squares was done at 11c for spot and 10%c for April delivery. Late delivery for 27-inch 64x60s, 7.60 yard, brought 5%c. Constructions, as for instance of 5-16c and 5%c. Large lots of 60x48s sold at 6%c, but for lots of less than 1000 pieces 6%c was obtained.

The bag trade took car load lots of several constructions, as for instance of 60x48s sold at 6%c for the best makes, and 6%c for second quality and 6%c for tinged.

Wide sheetings and drills were taken by the automobile and leather trades in fair-sized quantities; spot and april delivery ward at 5%c; 31-inch 5.00-yard sold at 6%c for second quality and 6%c for tinged.

Wide sheetings and drills were taken by the automobile and leather trades in fair-sized quantities; spot and april delivery. Some prices on wide sheetings were 66-inch 3.00-yard at 15c for second quarter delivery. Some 39-inch 4.00-yard twills sold for 9%c.

SALT LAKE CITY, March 27—Matt Staff of Boston, president of National Wool Exchange, recently in Salt Lake, said the world's 1927 below-normal wool production has all been purchased outside this country, and United States buyers must rely on wool produced in their own nation. Mr. Staff said this works no hardship on the manufacturers, as they can buy American wools cheaper than foreign. They have used up practically every pound of 1927. grown wool, and will need every pound of this spring's clip to keep their mills running.

Music Heard After Round Trip Across Atlantic Ocean

Record at WGY Picked Up in England on Speaker, Which Talks Into "Mike" and Sends Tune Back to America, All in 30 Seconds

A Wellington (New Zealand) radio experimenter, heard a General Electric Company engineer chatting with an English radio engineer via the ahort waves. The New Zealander, 7800 miles from Schenectady and 12,000 miles from Chelmsford, Eng., heard two men separated by the Atlantic Ocean, talk about the weather and transmission quality. He heard and transmission quality. He heard them laugh at witty sallies and he heard the "good-by" of the American and the "cheerio" of the Englishman.

The New Zealander, like other listeners in Canada and South Africa, was greatly puzzled at what appeared to him a peculiar radio phenomenon. He reported that when tuned to 2XAD, the 21.9 meter station at Schenectady, from which the American spoke, he heard the American clearly but the English voice other hand, when tuned to the 24-meter transmitter of 5SW at Chelmsford. Eng., he heard the Englishman perfectly and the American side of directly to the short wave trans-phone and hears the Englishman's reply through a loudspeaker, about two feet away. The loudspeaker reproduction of the English Eng., and WGY at Schenectady. Gen-

Strange Playfellows

DOLITICS, it has been said, makes strange bedfellows. It may as truthfully be said that in the great national game of politics as it is conducted according to accepted rules, it makes strange playfellows. Does it follow, if one is to play the game according to established traditions, and if he is to maintain his standing as a "regular," that he must overlook or condone by silence the unprofessional or unathical conduct of his team mates and felunethical conduct of his team mates and fellows? It is observed that the Republicans in high official positions who have been first to denounce the acts of those accused or involved by disclosures resulting from the inquiry into the source of contributions to the Republican campaign fund to meet the 1920 deficit are those who do not boast of their standing as regulars.

Among the outstanding Republicans who have been most insistent that the party purge itself from the oil contamination are Senators Borah, Capper and Norris, none of whom has been regarded as bound by any questionable rule defining "regularity." Those as solicitous as the gentlemen named for the continued welfare and success of the party make no secret of the fact that they believe that this welfare and success are imperiled by the continuing silence of acknowledged Republican leaders and their failure to denounce practices which the rank and file of the party deplore. It is not impossible that this silence may be wrongly construed as a tacit condonation of admittedly reprehensible conduct in the direction and management of the party's affairs in which the public has a vital

Possibly the denunciation which is awaited has been delayed in the hope that the disclosures still expected will involve the opposition party representatives as well. But extenuation and purging can come through no such channel. Two wrongs do not make a right. Those who stand in the position of beneficiaries of the tainted funds supplied by the oil land conspirators cannot absolve themselves by pointing the

Estonia's Tenth Birthday

S A modest and therefore all the more A praiseworthy sample of fine after-war re-Estonia, which this spring and summer celebrates the tenth anniversary of its independence. The first year its existence as a state was nately invaded by Russian and German armies. The revolutionary Russian armies occupied the capital, Reval, the very next day after the proclamation of liberty had been issued, and after that the Germans administered the country until their own collapse on the western front. For a while it seemed as though the declaration of independence would become nothing more than a historical document, but on the first anniversary, Feb. 24, 1919, General Laidoner was able to report his country's borders clear.

While it must be admitted that the susequent recognition by the western powers had something to do with Russian acquiescence in the loss of the province and the outlet to the Baltic, nevertheless the inhabitants have proved themselves worthy of independence by their own achievements. At first the outlook was anything but cheerful. Food supplies and other portable raw materials had been requisitioned and carried off by the Russians or Germans. The factories had been stripped of machinery. There were no public revenues and the Russian domestic market had been lost. Worst of all, the 100,000 soldiers in General Laidoner's army threatened to become as many unemployed, exposed to the extreme radical ideas of the Russian revolutionists.

At the same time 68 per cent of the tillable soil was owned by 618 families of the old Balt nobility with strong German affiliations. The remainder of the land belonged to the church or state, or was rented by rights of inheritance which perpetuated the power of the landowners. The solution of this dilemma, drastic, to be sure, and in certain instances a cause of individual hardships to the former landowners, was the agrarian reform of Oct. 10, 1919. About 40,000 new farms, ranging from ten to sixty hectares, were distributed among the former soldiers and added to the previous leaseholds. Estonia became a country of roughly 136,000 small farmsteads, a strong barrier against Bolshevism. The system of cultivation was changed from that of the large estates, producing grain for export, to a more intensive cultivation, yielding more refined food products. In five years the export of butter rose from 128 tons to 8691. As an offset to the loss in bargaining power the small farmers have formed co-operative societies for both buying and selling. A single purchasing agent buys for 285 units and 80 per cent of the butter exports are handled by one

The Government's finances have also been well managed. The budget was balanced and inflation stopped six years ago, and on January 1 of this year the gold standard went into effect. The new monetary unit is the "kroon," corresponding to the Swedish "krona," and with Finland as well as the Scandinavian countries the old trade relations have been revived. With Latvia a customs union and a military defensive convention have been concluded. In general, the country follows a policy of neutrality under the auspices of the League of Nations. Old cultural relations with the Occident have been revived. The University of Dorpat, founded by Gustavus Adolphus, has over 3000 students and in the rural continuation schools the number of pupils has increased 45 per cent. Next summer the independence celebrations will culminate in a huge singing festival in which a chorus of 15,000 voices will participate. voices will participate.

Traveling Seminars

THE annual pilgrimage across the Atlantic will soon be under way. Educators, students, and observers of world conditions will once again pursue their quest for a more accurate understanding of the major social and political problems of the day. It is a far cry back to the days when textbooks alone were regarded as the media through which an appreciation of the peoples and races of the various nations was to be obtained. Today, through the popularization of steamship transportation, aided here and there by airplanes and fast-moving trains, the dimensions of the classroom have been widened until they have come to include the ends of the earth.

The widespread vogue of transoceanic and transcontinental travel reflects more than an interest in mere sightseeing. For that curiosity, legitimate enough in itself, is now being supplemented by a desire on the part of many persons more fully to understand the social and economic issues of the countries included on the summer's itinerary. Ever since the war one seminar has stood out as a conspicuous and highly significant endeavor in the field of international education. Membership in the party in question is limited to those who are able, through their social and organizational contacts, to exert a constructive influence on public opinion. No definite theory of government or of economics is sponsored by this particular group. The aim of the seminar is to apply to the problems and conditions under review a discriminating and unprejudiced judgment. This year this party will visit London, Berlin, Prague, Vienna, Geneva and Paris. In London these pilgrim observers will be directed in their studies by a committee composed of Lord Astor, the Warden of Toynbee, and Sir William Beveridge, head of the London School of Economics. In Berlin, Chief Justice Simons, Prof. Julius Richter of the University of Berlin, and Dr. Arnold Wolfers of the Academy of Political Science are arranging the program. The Geneva schedule is being geared into the Institute of International Relations that meets yearly at the seat of the League of Nations. Eminent statesmen and journalists of note will confer with the party in Prague and Vienna.

This first-hand method of studying world conditions is of sounder pedagogical value than the older method of examining these various problems in the abstract and from the theoretical point of view. For one thing, the intimacy of the contacts thereby established contributes to a more balanced appraisal of the main essentials of the current happening under discussion. The events of the day are endowed with a certain human quality. Men are less baffling than theories and when human rela-tionships are involved the fundamental issues of a given circumstance may be more clearly discerned.

Spain Returns to the Fold

CPAIN'S absence from the League of Nations was never anything more than a tentative truancy. At heart Spain has always been a faithful and friendly patron at Geneva, and its decision to reinstate its membership is an opportune conclusion to the incident of 1926 when Madrid was refused a permanent seat on the Council. Its notice of resignation was a protest against this rebuff. Its return to the fold is evidence, at least from the European viewpoint, that membership in the League is a very tangible asset. Spain has had both experiences, and its delegate this time will receive a one-way ticket to Geneva.

Germany will welcome Spain's re-entry into the League perhaps more than any of the other nations, since the Germans have always regretted that their admission to membership was coincident with Spain's withdrawal, although not directly responsible for it. Germany's addition to the League made necessary a reorganization of the personnel of the Council, and it was incident to this reorganization that the Spanish demand for permanent representation was denied.

It is interesting to recall that when the League of Nations was first propounded at the Paris peace conference, it won the almost spontaneous approval of the Spanish authorities. The idea of a world community appealed to the imagination of the Spanish people as something both politically romantic and politically wise. At once they began to name streets in honor of Woodrow Wilson and to pass resolutions in tribute to the American President. The Spanish Government gave its ready adherence to the Covenant. Its experience, as a member and as a nonmember, has shown that the League can give it prestige with its neighbors on the continent and contact with the South American republics not otherwise obtainable.

Book Borrowers, Beware!

THE problem of the borrowed book has received a good deal of attention since printing was first added to the blessings of mankind, but the discovery of an efficient process for insuring its recovery still awaits the inspiration of genius. A head master, who is described in some quarters as deserving a place in the ranks of champion optimists, has written to The Times, of London, suggesting that an annual Book Borrowers' Day shall be set apart.

Others raise the question whether book lenders really desire the return of the books which they have lent to their friends. In reply to a query from the Observer, the secretary of the Library Association asks:

Do we not often lend our books in the hope that they will never be returned? Might there not equally be a national day for inflicting on one's friends all the books one no longer wants to keep? You see the confusion that may follow? And what of the poor conscientious person who just has to scratch his head and say: "Yes, I really must return that book—but who on earth did I borrow it from?" Still, I agree it does seem an attractive idea. . . .

The truth running through the good-natured banter seems to be that modern existence, generally carried on in the restricted space of small flats and apartments, leaves little room for the inevitably constant increase of books in the possession of most readers. To get rid of them and provide space for more, while at the same time placing friends under more or less of an obligation, seems not unpleasing to many book owners. Anyhow, few of them would have the hardihood to adopt the straightforward means for securing their return ascribed to one man who sent this New Year's greeting to a friend:

Best Wishes for a Happy New Year in 1928, 1929, and 1930. (You may get another card in 1931). P. S.: Could you possibly return that book you borrowed some months ago?

That South Pole Trip

TTHEN one recalls that less than a century ago the western section of the United States was unknown land to the civilized world, the theory that, say, a century hence the land, which it seems generally agreed exists around the south pole, may be a more or less populated region is not entirely visionary. Indeed the trip, upon which Commander Richard E. Byrd is shortly to start, may lead the way to almost countless discoveries, and inventions based thereon, for the benefit of the human race. As methods are devised whereby the extreme cold of these far-away parts of the globe can be combated, there is every reason why their potential resources, mineral and otherwise, should be fully utilized for purposes of mankind's enjoyment and benefit, Commander Byrd's reputation for thoroughness insures that this enterprise will be far more than a trip devoted to merely superficial investigation. He is starting with plans made for obtaining the greatest possible results from his efforts. Charts will be drawn, accurate measurements will be taken, and countless observations will be made for amplification and examination in leisure later. Never before has the attempt been undertaken in so methodical and definite a manner as in this instance, to force an unknown land to give up its secrets. The mysteries of past centuries are being solved, and with the finding of their solutions are being eliminated from world consciousness many fears and doubts that have held progress in check for so long. An organized offensive is being launched to conquer a continent.

Baseball Enthusiasm in Japan

MANY readers of a recent article in Asia were no doubt surprised to learn how enthusiastically baseball is nowadays played and followed in Japan. One has heard now and then about Japanese baseball, but thought of it as something exceptional: from the American point of view, a curiosity. It appears by this article that the United States and Japan have the game very much in common, though with certain differences. Opposing teams in the United States do not, for example, bow to each other and the umpire at the end of a game; nor do players or spectators in Japan express hostility to the umpire when his judgment runs counter to their desires. But they crowd a stadium capable of holding $5,000 spectators to see an important game in a championship series, and throughout the Nation her crowds gather before newspaper

This condition has come about during the last quarter of a century, although the acorn, one might say, was planted a little earlier, About thirty-six years ago some Japanese engineers, educated in the United States, thought to enliven the leisure of a railway job by organizing teams among the employees to play the American game. A Keio University student saw them playing it and started baseball at his university. The game spread year by year among Japanese schools and colleges; eventually it aroused public interest and became more a major sport. One judges that it has remained an amateur sport.

What about this is more interesting even than the adoption of the American game by the Japanese people is the practice of a sportsmanship that derives from the ancient samurai, or warrior class, of medieval Japan. The game is said to have found welcome with Japanese educators because it lent itself readily to the practice and perpetuation of the samurai code of honor. It is by virtue of the samurai ideal of behavior that the Japanese baseball team "plays to win," but, if defeated, hides its disappointment and applauds the winners. "In playing technique," says the writer, "the Japanese baseballer still has far to go before the highest American standards have been reached, but in sportsmanship he clearly leads."

The derby hat, or bowler, which is dotting the landscape in constantly increasing numbers, may yet retrieve its popularity of a decade or two ago. Even those of the 1910 model have an appeal beyond that of antiquity. Recent explorations in the basement of a Brookfield (Mass.) store disclosed an old stock of retired derbies which, placed in a show window at 25 cents each, speedily, found their way to the heads of as many high school boys.

Probably one of the chief reasons the Prince of Wales is held in such high esteem all over the world may be illustrated by an incident which recently took place. The Prince had shaken hands, by mistake, with a waiter at a formal gathering. "But, sir, I'm only a waiter." "I don't see that that makes any difference," said the Prince as he shook hands over again.

In awarding gold "R"s for meritorious work in nonathletic activities, Rutgers University is giving the undergraduate not interested or qualified to take part in college sports, a chance to win a letter. Sort of modern version of Reading, Riting and Rithmetic.

Politics appears to be the only well-oiled machine that develops friction.

The Queen of Fruits

THE mangosteen grows to perfection in various countries of the Far East, such as the Malay Peninsula about Penang, the Dutch East Indies, and in French Indo China, especially in the part called Cochin China near Saigen, the capital city. Farther north than Saigen, which is only ten degrees north of the equator, the climate soon becomes too cool for this delicate tree to bear edible found though bardier fruitless way still be found.

fruit, though hardier, fruitless varieties may still be found.
But let us have a look at Saigon, now that we are there, for the French have done wonders in this little copy of Paris among the Annamites. The streets are fringed with shade trees, so that seen from an eminence the outlines of the city are lost beneath a mass of tree tops, except for the cathedral spire and the roofs of some of the larger buildings. The wild almond is here with its speckled shade like that of the symmers. The rue despeckled shade like that of the sycamore. The rue de Bangkok leads down to the cemetery between two rows of stately dipterocarpus alatus (too bad it has no common name), and the dark shade of the tamarind, the best shade tree of the tropics, gives a somber tone to the whole

Everything, man and beast, everything but the carabaos or water buffalos, seeks the shade. These great, hulking, indifferent creatures with hides of double-thick soleleather, defy the sun and all his powers as they bury themselves in the slimy coze of a buffalo wallow, with only their snouts sticking up out of the mud, whence they issue grunts of deep, swinish satisfaction.

They look as ungainly as the rhinoceros, and for a white man they are almost as dangerous, though the native brown children may play about them and ride them with

No matter what time of the year you arrive in Salgon you will always find some fresh fruit in season. There are oranges, lemons, limes, pincapples, bananas in over fifty varieties, besides pomeloes, papayas, lychees, carambolas, custard apples, persimmons, duriens, mangoes, and the queen of them all, the fabulous mangosteen. The largest mangosteen grove in the world, we are told, is at Laithieu, about ten kilometers outside of Saigon, and from April to September they are in fruit, and you can buy all you can eat for about ten cents a dozen.

It was early in May and the first of the mangosteens had already appeared in the market, when a merry party of us went whizzing in an automobile along the finely paved road to Lai-thieu. The whole region was clad with what we took to be orange trees, for they were about the same size, shape and periphery, while an occasional arica palm with a crowning tuft of fronds reached high in air above them.

But someone noticed that these trees bore purplish fruit, and then the truth dawned on us all—the mange-steen. The whole country round about was forested with this mangosteen orchard or grove, with openings here and there for the huts of the natives. No time was lost. We stopped, dismounted, purchased, tasted, and mumbled stopped, dismounted, purchased, tasted, and mumbled our appreciation between bites.

The mangosteen is about the size of a small orange, and quite as round, seldom more than two inches in diameter. The outside is a purplish husk, resembling that of a pomegranate, and a sharp knife is needed to remove it. This husk once removed you have a soft, white, juicy pulp, the texture like that of an orange, and in sections like the orange. And what does it taste like? Why like a mangosteen, of course, and nothing else in the world. How would you describe the taste of a peach or a strawberry or any other fruit? It is neither sweet nor sour. berry or any other fruit? It is neither sweet nor sour, nor acid, nor bitter, nor puckery, and as to the rest, well, you must taste it to find out. When one comes to such a point as this all language fails.

The mangosteen is too delicate in texture to keep very long, even with the protection of its thick, purplish husk. It will stand transportation over but a limited distance, hence it can never be brought from the East Indies, unless by means never yet employed for the purpose. But the tree may be brought, and indeed has been successfully brought, to the West Indies and transplanted there, though not yet in abundance.

In fact, the writer started from Saigon with thirty young mangosteen trees, and three of them were still alive after a trip of forty days, and were duly delivered to the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington. But there is no home for such delicate creatures in the United States outside of a hothouse. The tree loves a rich, black alluvial soil, plentifully watered or even covered with water in the fruiting season, and the water must be fresh, not brackish. It cannot stand a temperature colder than sixty degrees Fahrenheit. Botanically considered, it stands in a class all by itself, having no relative either near a remark to the stands in a class all by itself, having no relatives either near or remote.

It is worth a trip to the tropics and all the attendant dangers and discomforts thereof just to have all the mangosteens you can eat, for it has appropriately been named "The Queen of Fruits."

From the World's Great Capitals-Rome

NE of the most genial products of the Fascist régime is the National Balilla Institution, which, although only a few years old, has made wonderful progress in its short career, and is today a veritable state organism. Fascism, being mainly based on the evocation of youthful faith in Italy's greatness, could not afford to neglect the boy formations, which are now potentially, and will in a few years be practically, the mainstay of the Fascist movement. Out of a total of 4,000,000 boys between the ages of eight and eighteen now living in Italy, 1,000,000 have been enlisted in these youthful formations, partly as Avanguardisti, namely old boys, and partly as Balilla, or youngsters ranging from any age: in fact, it has now become the fashion to register a baby as a Balilla at birth. Quite apart from the sentimental significance of this Fascist innovation, which necessarily bears the seal of youth and originality, it cannot be denied that from a strictly military and political point of view its importance can hardly be overrated. Indeed, it means that there are 300 legions of well-armed youths of about sixteen or eighteen, enthusiastically ready to defend Fascism to the utmost—a reserve which few European armies possess, and from which the regime could draw freely, with the absolute knowledge of boundless devotion and discipline on the part of the new-fledged legionaries,

In an important circular addressed to his subordinates, the Minister of Education, Pietro Fedele, exhorts them, and more especially the "Provveditori agli studii," to give every help and encouragement in their power to the Balilla work, which has for its object the preparation of conscientious and hard-working citizens, brought up on sentiments of devotion to their country, "which is equiva-lent," adds the Minister, "to being good Fascist citizens capable of feeling the pride and responsibility which such a status implies." Special attention is to be given to physical education, which will be imparted to all boys from eight years of age, namely from the third elementary standard, to fourteen, following a program to be called 'Nationalist-Fascist program of sporting and gymnastic education." A special course for teachers shortly will be opened and will be of the duration of two years, with an extra year for those candidates (who must not be more than twenty-five years of age) who aspire to a higher degree. The first high school for physical tuition will be inaugurated in Rome with the most modern apparatus and appliances, and others will gradually be founded in the principal cities as occasion arises.

The report on the activities of the Italian police during the past year shows that Italy has made a great step forward in her effort to reduce the number of wine shops, and thus indirectly limit the consumption of alcoholic drinks. During 1927 almost 9000 licenses were withdrawn, and the number of wine shops in a country inhabited by 40,000,000 people has dropped from 20,000 to little more than 11,000. Here again one must give full credit to Signor Mussolini for this campaign, the success of which has exceeded all expectation. But the Duce is not yet satisfied, and has again issued severe orders to the police officials to close the largest possible number of wine shops, bars and taverns, still too numerous. More than 5000 bars and saloons were closed during 1927, their present number being 99,000. This means that there is one bar for every 400 inhabitants, a proportion which must be set right. The police authorities have received strict instructions against the granting of new licenses, and have at the same time been ordered to make a severe revision of the existing ones.

During the work of restoration of the historical communal palace of Montefalco, in Umbria, some important frescoes of the early fifteenth century covering a surface of about four square yards came to light, and are now the object of careful study by experts. The part of the fresco which has already been completely uncovered represents an enthroned Madonna and Child with two angels holding a crown over her head. At the sides of the central figure are two saints. The frescoes are said to be in a good state of preservation, but the name of the artist has not yet been discovered, and an inscription in Gothic letters above the Madonna has still to be deciphered. Judging by the delicate workmanship the present theory is that the frescoes are the work of one of the best artists of the time.

It is well known that all the Italian laws, when it i not specified otherwise, are applicable to both nationals and foreigners. This general rule, which is also applicable to foreigners living in other countries, has given rise to some peculiar difficulties in Italy, where, since the advent of Fascism to power, special legislation restricting or imposing certain activities to Italian citizens has been introduced, and is likely to remain in force for a very long time. The Fascist Syndicalist Law, for instance, re quires all citizens to enroll themselves in their proper syndicalist association or corporation; should foreigners residing in Italy comply with this law? This particular and the position of foreigners in Italy with regard to the Fascist Syndicalist Law have now been defined.

After ten years' residence in Italy a foreigner may join his proper syndicalist association; his position in the association will be that of an ordinary member, but he will not be allowed to hold any office in the same. Many foreigners have shown reluctance to join these associations, even when entitled to do so, chiefly because they believe that membership in a purely party association will imply some political activity. The Ministry of Corporations now states that such political activity is not expected of foreigners, whose duty will simply consist in showing respect for the law and the national sentiment.

Desirous that in the building and upkeep of roads, as in all other fields, Italy should be on a par with modern progress, the Fascist Government has recently established an Autonomous State Road Corporation (Ente Autonomo Statale della Strada) with powers which insure prompt and rapid action. The first task intrusted to it is the up-keep of the "first class" national roads, covering a total of some 20,500 kilometers. Besides keeping the whole network in repair, it is to rebuild, in accordance with modern technique, 6000 kilometers of those most in need of renevation. This work is to be completed within four years. The first fifty kilometers of the main roads radiating from Rome and from the other principal cities are also to be permanently paved. The funds assigned annually in the budget for the upkeep and enlargement of "first class" roads will henceforth be available for the corporation, which will also receive the circulation tax paid by automobiles and the road improvements rates levied by the previncial administrations. The proper use of the roads an Autonomous State Road Corporation (Ente Autonomo provincial administrations. The proper use of the roads and the supervision of the traffic will be insured by a new corps just established, to be known as the "road militia," affiliated with the National Volunteer Militia for National

A new sports camp, which it is claimed will be the largest yet built in Europe, will shortly rise up on the out-skirts of Rome. The plan, which has already been ap-proved by the Minister of Public Works and by Signor Mussolini, includes the construction of a large stadium capable of seating 100,000 persons, and two new pleasure resorts with modern villas on Mount Crescenzo and near the Lake of Nemi. The sports ground will be situated between the Capannelle race course and the military aviation camp of Ciampino, at about seven miles from Rome, and will include football grounds, tennis courts. motorcycle and running tracks, and parking space for 5000 automobiles and 3000 cycles. Each of the two pleasure resorts will have 1000 villas specially designed to suit the requirements of middle-class families. The stadium and the pleasure resorts will be linked to the capital by special motor roads starting from the gate of San Giovanni. The initial expenses are estimated at 60,-000,000 lire, or about $3,160,000.

"Cut Prices and the Consumer"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The remarks of Edward Filene recently published in this column on "Cut Prices and the Consumer" merit the most profound attention. It is readily agreed that the new business theory of mass production and distribution reduces prices to consumers, that the new economic theory of placing more money in the consumers' hands through lowered prices, increased wages, or dividends is a benefit, and that the chain stores embody these new theories in their operation, which is one reason for their wonderful growth. It is not so readily agreed, on the other hand, that if the makers' retail prices were main-tained by law, manufacturers and distributors would have less incentive to eliminate waste; that sales would be forced of the higher priced goods, or that manufacturers' nationally advertised brands would be

Mr. Filene admits that even under the present "cut price" system many products are sold for more than they are worth, that there is a great deal of waste in production and distribution, and that no nationally advertised brands have, in his business, lived long. One reason for these conditions, I think, is that under the system, as soon as a product is well established by advertising, certain "cut price" retailers reduce the regular retail price, which, although there are exceptions, "kills" the sale of the product.

What is needed in place of the "cut price" system is more co-operation between producer and distributor. The real question is, Do "cut prices" affect the consumer and under the present "cut price" system the answer is that they do not; for they are generally used as advertising leaders to attract trade. Provided that the maker of an article claiming the protection of a fixed price law supplies a good value at a fair price, I think that a fixed retail price would afford more co-operation between maker and distributor, stabilize prices, and result in lower prices to the consumer.
